Grants (Pending)

Sexual Violence Among University Students: An empirical study of prevalence and associated risk factors. "Experiencias de violencia sexual en las/los estudiantes de la UNAM: Un estudio empírico de prevalencia y factores de riesgo asociados".

Programa de Apoyo a Proyectos de Investigación e Innovación Tecnológica (PAPIIT) UNAM, IG300418

PI: Agoff

This project seeks to measure the magnitude of sexual violence that affects undergraduate students of the National Autonomous University of Mexico. To this end, an electronic survey and self-study, representative of the female and male undergraduate students of the UNAM, will be carried out, which will allow us to know the prevalence and factors associated with sexual violence.

Role on Grant: Consultant

Grants (Current)

Center for a Lifecourse Approach to Adolescent Well-Being

Institute for Social and Economic Research and Policy (ISERP) (Total Cost $39,770)
Columbia University
PIs: Khan and Hirsch
January 1, 2018-December 31, 2018

The goal of this pilot center grant is to develop a startup center to advance a program of interdisciplinary research on the institutional drivers of young adult well-being, using a lifecourse approach with particular attention to substance use, mental health, gender, and sexual health

Weatherhead East Asian Institute,

Columbia University (Total Cost: $6,200)
PI: Hirsch
September 1, 2018 – December 31, 2018

Grant to host a satellite session at the upcoming 9th Asia Pacific Conference on Reproductive and Sexual Health and Rights (APCRSHR9) in Vietnam, at which panelists (including Professor Hirsch) will present new work on sexual assault among students in high school and college.

Structural and Social Transitions Among Adolescents in Rakai (SSTAR)

NICHD, 1R01HD091003-01 (Total Cost: $518,789)
PI: Santelli
September 1, 2016 - August 31, 2021

The Structural and Social Transitions among Adolescents and young adults in Rakai (SSTAR) project will investigate the influence of social structural determinants on social transitions from adolescence to adulthood using innovative statistical and qualitative research methodologies. SSTAR will define risk factors for and trends over time in key social transitions (sexual initiation, school leaving, marital formation and dissolution, migration, initiation of childbearing); interrelationships among transitions (ordering, timing, tempo); and consequences (HIV risk behaviors, acquisition) among adolescents and young adults (15-24 years) using mixed methods.
Role: Investigator

Doctoral Dissertation Research: An Ethnographic and Historical Study of Therapeutic Communities

National Science Foundation (Total Cost: $25,000)
PIs: Hirsch and Parker
July 1, 2017 - December 31, 2018

This project seeks to understand how history and institutions may affect the understanding of appropriate forms of therapy in specific times and places. The research will be carried out in Puerto Rico by Columbia University anthropology doctoral student, Caroline Parker, supervised by Dr. Jennifer Hirsch. Ms. Parker will undertake archival research and oral history interviews to trace the historical growth of Puerto Rico's therapeutic communities from a single state-run program founded in the early 1960s to a decentralized network of over 150 mutual-aid collectives operating across the island. In addition to the historical component, she will conduct twelve months of ethnographic fieldwork in two of the communities, collecting data through long-term participant observation and in-depth interviews.

Sexual Health Initiative to Foster Transformation (SHIFT)

Office of the President, Columbia University (Total Cost: $2,200,000)

PIs: Hirsch and Mellins

January 1, 2015 - December 31, 2017

This initiative brings together a team of faculty from across the university to examine the individual, interpersonal and ecological factors shaping sexual health and sexual violence among Columbia undergraduates. The goals of the project, which includes ethnographic and survey research, are to generate theory-driven, evidence-based policy recommendations to enhance the campus climate as well as to advance the science of sexual violence prevention.

Columbia-Vietnam Social Science Training and Research Partnership: STAR II

NIH/NICHHD, 2R24 HD056691-06 (Total Cost: $1,703,455)

PIs: Hirsch and Parker

July 1, 2013 - June 30, 2018

Columbia faculty and Vietnamese investigators will collaborate to build the capacity of the Vietnamese Social Science Research Community and support Hanoi Medical University as the emerging national hub for the production and dissemination of social and behavioral science knowledge related to HIV and AIDS

Advancing PREP for Black MSM: Community-Based Ethnography And Clinic-Based Intervention

NIH/NIMH, 1R01MH098723-01 (Total Cost: $3,071,303)

PIs: Colson and Hirsch

September 21, 2012 - July 31, 2017 (now in no-cost extension)

The study consists of community-based research to explore factors relevant to how Black MSM might engage with PrEP, and then research in a community primary care clinic to compare two packages for providing PrEP. Together these efforts provide critical information for building more effective HIV prevention interventions for this at-risk population.

Institute for Research on Women, Gender and Sexuality (IRWGS), Curriculum Development Grant

IRWGS (Total Cost: $3,000)

PI: Hirsch

This grant provides support to develop a new class, Gender and Public Health, taught at the undergraduate level.

Doctoral Research Training in Sociomedical Sciences

NIH/NICHHD, T32 HD049339-11 (Total Cost: $936,550)

PI: C. Nathanson

September 4, 2017 - April 30, 2022

This project funds a pre-doctoral fellowship program offered through the department of Sociomedical Sciences at the Mailman School of Public Health designed to prepare students for research and teaching careers in gender and sexuality and their impact on reproductive and sexual health.

Role: Co-Director

Columbia Population Research Center

NIH/NICHD, 1R24HD058486-01A1 (Total Cost: $1,467,437)

PIs: Waldfogel and Hirsch (shift to Multiple PI grant in process)

September 2014 - August 2019

The primary goal of this Center is to promote the health and well-being of vulnerable populations. It approach these populations-poor men, women, children, and families; cross-border and rural-urban migrants; racial, ethnic, and sexual minorities; persons with or at risk of contracting HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted infections-in the context of local and global social and economic inequalities.

Role through June 2015: Co-Chair, Developmental Infrastructure Core; Co-Director, Reproductive Health and HIV Substantive Research Area Group

Role as of July 2016: Co-Director

The HIV Center for Clinical and Behavioral Studies (IRM Core)

NIH/NIMH, 6 P30 MH43520-25 $145,621 (subcontract)

PI of subcontract: R. Bayer

PI of overall project: Remien, Mellins and Carballo-Diequez

February 1, 2013 - January 31, 2018

This project entails national and international scientific research on HIV prevention and transmission with a particular emphasis on elucidating the critical roles of sexual behavior, gender, and sexual orientation in uninfected and infected populations, particularly urban populations at risk, and with a developmental focus throughout the lifespan.

Role: Member, Intervention Science Core

Grants (Past)

Doctoral Research Training in Sociomedical Sciences

NIH/NICHD, T32 HD049339-02 (Total Cost: $1,689,900)

PI: C. Nathanson

April 1, 2012 – March 31, 2017

This represented the renewal of our pre-doctoral fellowship program, offered through the department of Sociomedical Sciences at the Mailman School of Public Health and designed to prepare students for research and teaching careers in gender and sexuality and their impact on reproductive and sexual health.
